Following Christ means total commitment

BY FR. THEOPHAN BUCK

Over this last year I have been in the chaotic, tiring and expensive process of remodeling my house. One of the things that is interesting about do-it-yourself remodelers is that they suffer from a certain delusion about how much time, effort and money a project will actually take. Over and over again I found myself underestimating the workload and expense and even though time and time again I was proved wrong, somehow the delusion stuck: "The next project will take less time and less money." In the Gospel of Luke chapter 14 our Lord addresses the multitudes, saying "whoever does not bear his cross and come after Me cannot be My disciple." In verse 28 Jesus goes on to say "For which of you, intending to build a tower, does not sit down first and count the cost, whether he has enough to finish it, lest, after he has laid the foundation, and is not able to finish, all who see it begin to mock him, saying, 'This man began to build and was not able to finish?'"

The above quoted passage from Luke should challenge those who consider themselves Christians. In our modern times following Christ has often been presented in overly simplistic terms. One only has to look at the billboards that apparently want us to make a quick (eternal fire insurance) decision about "Heaven or Hell." In other places Christianity is presented as a religion of self-help, confirming the statement made by Karl Marx: "Religion is the opiate of the people."

Christ does not ask us merely to make a decision, or to simply believe in Him, confess Him or to simply be moral and go to church. Jesus did not come to provide us with eternal fire insurance or to help us adjust so that we could be "happy" in the sense that most of us would understand. However, Jesus did come to save us and heal us, but the Gospel is clear that although salvation is freely offered, following Christ comes with a heavy "price." The Apostle Paul with his proud Hebrew lineage tells us in Philippians 3, "I also count all things loss for the excellence of the knowledge of Christ Jesus my Lord, for whom I have suffered the loss of all things, and count them as rubbish, that I may gain Christ."

What a paradox, our Lord wants us to take on His light yoke (Matt. 11:30), and yet He tells us "whoever of you does not forsake all that he has cannot be My disciple" (Luke 14:33). Let us not be delusional about our following of Christ. "Jesus is the same yesterday, today and forever." He does not want a small segment of our lives that we are willing to painlessly give Him. He does not want our "leftovers" or to be given a mere 10 percent of our lives. He does not want us to simply make a decision and move on with our lives. Our Lord is clear; He wants 100 percent of our lives. He wants us to find our entire life in Him and to be willing in exchange to give our entire life to Him. This is the Gospel challenge presented to us.

Let us take a serious look at our Christian walk. Let us not be delu-sional, thinking that the following of Christ is easy and will not cost us. Everything of eternal value requires great effort. Being Christian has never been easy. May God bless us to embrace, to pick up, our own crosses that we may build on the foundation of our decision and belief and truly follow the "narrow" way of the Gospel which leads to salvation in Christ Jesus our Lord.
